OLD UNION SCENE OF ACTIVITIES NIGHT '54; CLUBS ERECT BOOTHS

Every year an activities night is held at McGill to enable freshmen and others to join any of the numerous clubs on the campus. At 8 p.m. tonight this year's Activities Nite will be opening at the Union.

Each club will be trying to entice new members into its fold. Booths will be set up all over the Union and members of each club will be on hand to enroll new members and answer any questions concerning the club's activities. Freshmen will have a choice ranging from the Glee to the Gliding club, from the Chess to the Checker-club. Most students of foreign nationalities also have their own clubs represented at the University.

At 9 p.m. the Red and White Revue will put on two new numbers "The Hornpipe" and "The Rag" — for the benefit of the students. Mr. Peter Hale will sing "Mr. Weatherman" and will be followed by two dancing numbers starring Jill Manson.

At 9.30 p.m. in preparation for a Ballroom dancing course to be given students at McGill this year, the International Dance Studios will present a Dancing Exhibition by its professional members.

After the Exhibition, a Social Dance will be held for all students. This Dance will start at 10 p.m., and is open to all students stag or drag.

Sometime during the evening the McGill Outing Club (MOC) will probably give an exhibition of mountain climbing, using the side of the Union as the Mountain. This affair usually attracts a large crowd, not so much to see the skill involved but rather to see if the ropes will break.

Since all the entertainment, dancing and refreshments are free, a very large turnout is expected by the clubs and the organisers.

MCGILL AT MAC OUTING TO BE HELD SATURDAY

This year's annual McGill at Macdonald day has been scheduled for this Saturday. According to Marvin Jay, McGill Chairman for the event, "It will be the biggest and best yet."

Students who go on this outing will have a chance to see a senior football game when Macdonald plays Bishop. The game will begin at 2 p.m. After the contest the Gold Key, Macdonald's Honour Society, will conduct tours of the campus. Supper will consist of a chicken barbecue dinner to be served in the Main Dining Hall.

The evening program will include a sing-song and a showing of the movie, "Man With a Million" starring Gregory Peck. After the show there will be square and social dancing to the music of the Avalon Quartet. The dance will be either stag or drag.

Busses will be leaving the campus at 12 and 12.30 p.m. They will leave Macdonald for the city at midnight.

Tickets will be on sale today and tomorrow from 12 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Union. The charge is $1.25 for students who plan to provide their own transportation and approximately $2.00 for students who wish to take advantage of the bus service provided.

The committee in charge of the day reports that ticket sales are going very well so far. 50 tickets were sold the first day they were available.

Last year 115 students visited McGill's campus in the country on the annual McGill-Macdonald day.

"Big Bleed" Opens October 25

By Bryna Feingold

We need blood! Blood? Yeah, blood! We need pints of blood, quarts of blood, gallons of blood, bottles of blood, flasks of blood, and even vessels of blood. We need red blood, blue blood, or any other kind of blood you may have, assuming of course that you have blood.

Just how much blood does exist at McGill will be discovered during the week of October 25th, during which time the annual Blood Donor Campaign will begin "with a splash". Following last year's pattern, the mobile Red Cross clinic will be set up in the basement of the Physical Science Centre, and open between the hours of 9.30-11.45 and 1.15-5 p.m.

Appointments for giving blood can be made commencing today in Wilson Hall, Douglas Hall, and RVC; starting Monday booths will be also set up in the Union, and the Engineering and Arts Buildings.

Last year's objective was 1500 pints of blood; when the campaign ended 1648 pints had been realized, and the campaign had capped a Dominion record for McGill. This year the campaign committee, headed by Pete Abbott, has set the required total at 1650 pints.

Competition runs rampant between fraternities, faculties, and residence halls. 1953's campaign was climaxed by members of the Engineering faculty grimly cleaning the steps of the Arts building in time to a refrain of "Bloody Mary is the girl we love..." gleefully chanted by the Arts and Science faculty.

MCGILL TO VOTE AGAINST NFCUS MEMBERSHIP IN IUS, URGES CONTINUED CONTACT

By Dale English

The Students' Executive Council, at its meeting last night, mandated its delegates to the NFCUS conference to vote against NFCUS taking up an associate membership with the International Union of Students.

The motion read: "Be it resolved that the SEC does not approve of associate membership for NFCUS with IUS this year, although it does not close the door on further negotiation with the IUS in future years."

An associate membership with IUS would permit NFCUS to participate in the activities of the Communist dominated organization, while still disassociating itself with IUS policy statements.

Report on IUS

The decision of the Council was brought about by a report by three NFCUS observers on the annual council meeting of the IUS held in Moscow in August.

The report said: "Though appreciating that indicative changes in IUS policy have taken place since 1950 . . . yet the Moscow Council Meeting clearly shows that there is still no hope of the needed basic changes necessary to achieve a true unity."

"The new flexibility which permits the IUS to be more conciliatory in its dealings with non-member National Unions of Students is clearly the result of the new Communist approach to international affairs and the growing importance and representativity of the International Student Conferences (CoSec) which the IUS fears".

Conclusions

The report concluded with the recommendation that the IUS offer of associate membership be discarded "as unrealistic and unsatisfactory."

The SEC also mandated its NFCUS delegates to vote in favour of a National Employment Bureau for students, and to vote for an investigation of the possibilities of student group insurance on a national basis.

Appointments

Steve Hymer, Arts 4, and Danny Usher, Arts 4, were named co-chairmen of National Affairs on the McGill NFCUS Committee. They will hold this position during this academic year.

Committee Reports

The chairman of the Parking Committee, dealing with applications for permits for student parking on the campus, announced that 95 permits had been allocated, and that letters and stickers to this effect had been mailed.

Until tomorrow, parking without a permit will be permitted. After that, only cars appropriately adorned with an official sticker will be allowed to park in the two student parking lots.

Lending Library

It was announced that a lending library of popular books will be set up in Redpath Library shortly. The sum of $700. was put away for this purpose a few years ago out of the Bookstore profits. Previously space has not permitted the library being set up.

A second hand book store for the whole campus will be inaugurated next fall, when a giant store will be set up in the Old Redpath Hall. It is expected that this will help many students with the purchase of needed texts.

The Council approved in principle the constitution of a Current Affairs Club, and approved two budgets for the year.

Debating Lectures Begin Tomorrow

For the first time, the A.S.U.S. Debating Committee, in conjunction with the Debating Union, is sponsoring a weekly lecture series on debating techniques and skills. The final meeting will take place tomorrow at 1.00 p.m. in the Union. Co-chairmen of this event are Ralph Ordower and Phil Shapiroznick.

These talks are to deal with every aspect of the argument, from the preparation to the proper delivery of the rebuttal. The speakers have been chosen from the prime debaters in all faculties. Marv Gameroff, president of the Student's Society, will open the series tomorrow with an explanation of these lectures and a talk on debating itself.

As an added incentive, the weekly program will include speeches by eminent McGill professors on the more difficult points of oratory, such as, logic and reasoning.

Union To Sponsor Dancing Courses

This year, for the first time, the Union will sponsor a dancing course, given by instructors from International Dance Studios. The fee is $10.00 for twenty lessons, and all types of dances will be taught.

Registration for these lessons will commence this week with forms on faculty notice boards and in the Union Tuckshop. Classes will be held between 5.00 and 8.00 p.m. on week nights, each group consisting of 25 to 50 students.

Your instructors, Rita Cote and Michael Baker will present an exhibition dance at the activities night in the Union tomorrow.

FOOTBALL A NUISANCE?

Robert M. Hutchins, noted American spokesman for the anti-progressivist movement in education, has a certain-to-be controversial article in today's issue of Sports Illustrated.

"College football," he says, "is an infernal nuisance."

Always one to practice what he preaches, Hutchins was responsible for pitching intercollegiate football out of the University of Chicago when he was president of that institution.

This great educator never fails to provide the public with the full philosophical background behind any of his actions. The present case is no exception. Big-time college athletics, he says, hamper a university's efforts to become the kind of institution it should aspire to be — "one devoted to education, research, and scholarship."

Hutchins does not attack sport as such; he is all in favor of it, but makes it clear what he thinks its place should be: "We Americans are the only people in human history who ever got sport mixed up with higher education."

He adds that no other country looks to its universities as a prime source of athletic entertainment: "I believe that one of the reasons why we attach such importance to the results of football games is that we have no clear idea of what a college or university is. We can't understand these institutions, even if we graduated from one; but we can grasp the figures on the score board."

Attacking the necessity of competing in the open market for players, Hutchins points out that university presidents cannot halt this corrupt practice without running afoul of prominent alumni with endowment-available money.

His hope for a solution to the university's dilemma lies in the slow but steady progress of professional football, to the point where people will no longer pay to see college football. He longs for the day when students will come to college to study, and alumni will believe "that this is something a normal, red-blooded, young American can properly do."

Hutchins' reasoning is sound, and we can sympathize with his desire for universities to attain a high educational level.

But we object to the tone of his remarks: "We Americans are the only people in human history who ever got sport mixed up with higher education."

Surely Americans are entitled to be different if they want to be? There is no reason why American — and Canadian — universities should not be "mixed-up" with sport.

It is not sport that universities must fight: it is the danger of too much emphasis being placed on sport that must be fought. Some American universities have apparently fought a losing battle in this respect, bringing despair to the hearts of Hutchins and other thinking people.

McGill, fortunately, has not been bothered with this sort of thing. Study is study and football is football, and studying comes first no matter how much fun football may be.

We will not hurt ourselves by continuing an interest in football. Our "campus spirit" stems from McGill's own worthy name. Football is but a demonstration of this spirit.

Letters To The Editor

"To You . . . You . . . and You"

My blood boiled when I read "From The Pewter Mug" of last Tuesday. I suddenly became very disillusioned about some of my fellow students. How can this writer have the nerve to talk about McGill spirit when he shows himself to be completely ignorant of the characteristics of such a spirit? Basically he is an unhappy student. He is not the only one. Not only is he unhappy himself, but he insists in spreading his dreary gospel among his fellow students. Man is not perfect, nor shall he ever be so. A man being imperfect needs help. Does it really matter if McGill wins or loses as long as she does her best — no team is perfect, especially a new one. Do we go out to watch football with the sole purpose of watching a big red machine, stocked with the best paid high school players in the country, walk over all opposition? Is that fun? Is that going to be our attitude towards life when we continue our way in the world after graduation? Part of anyone's education is to learn to live with people, to know their weaknesses, limitations and joys, and to help others; to recognize their joys and successes, and to join in with such. McGill is an old friend of mine. I know some of her weaknesses and much of her strength. I will stick with this friend, not because of any apparent obligation binding on me, but since I strongly feel deep down that I am really a part of this great university.

And so I still go to McGill football games with 4500 other people. There are still many people who feel that there is more to life than the mere conquest of material perfection . . . there were many who were still cheering for McGill when the final whistle blew. They had no obligation to do so. They cheered because they felt a need to do so . . . a need which is very basic. It was that spontaneous outburst of affection and encouragement of one man to a friend; a friend who needs another's assistance. When a friend fails to live up to your hopes, do you leave him floundering, and only call him friend again when he is successful? When the football team loses I can't get angry, leave the game to return only when it is a contender again. Deep down I feel that I am part of that team; that it is a close friend.

All I can suggest to you . . . you . . . and you is to get to know McGill as you would a new room mate. A university is a human institution. Learn her weaknesses, and try to assist her; participate in her successes, and feel her joys. Perhaps then we will acknowledge that we have received an education here at McGill; an education in the true meaning of that word.

FROM THE IVORY TOWER

by Michael Laine

I met a young lady recently who likes to "squish" people. Squishing is the practice of carrying on a verbal sparring match while keeping one's weapons cleverly hidden until the opponent drops his guard. Then you let him have it right between the eyes. Squishing then, is like sparring with 16 ounce gloves keeping a horseshoe in the right one.

Now how does this young lady make use of her remarkable talent. She uses light squishing for her personal amusement. This is a sort of pleasant exercise whereby she sharpens her wits for the serious business of squishing people in earnest. Serious squishing she reserves for religious arguments.

Years ago people were a good deal more sensible in choosing topics for serious argument. They argued, and fought too, about important things; about crops and about women. Things like that really matter. Heads were broken in heated discussions on these topics. Nowadays the only place heads are broken is at Louiseville.

Personally I draw the line at arguing about religion. Although I pretend to be a tolerant man, I shall refuse to admit that anyone else has any case whatsoever when they speak of religion. How can they have a case. Obviously I'm right. Obviously I have the only answer. There simply are no two ways about it.

It is established then, that I'm irrefutable in matters of religion and no one need know my particular point of view to see this clearly. Today a civilized human being must look at religion in this light. The young lady is way off the track, she is occupying herself with trivia. She is pretty and bright, believes the acceptable things, belongs to the acceptable organizations, yet she has a perverse streak in her nature, this delight in watching a fellow human being squirm with embarrassment when caught in some cleverly concealed verbal trap. It's just not civilized!

"Art Of The Fugue"

Reviewed by Ted Brown

On Tuesday night, Alexander Brott conducted a performance of Bach's last work, The Art of the Fugue, in an arrangement by Leonard Isaacs. Mr. Brott is obviously devoted to this work, and his performance had so much evidence of this enthusiasm that it would seem almost an affront to criticize it; at all times the music was intensely affecting, completely belying both tradition and the rather terrifying program describing the fugues, which prepared the listener for a dry setting forth of all the tricks of fugue writing in a logical order.

However, I felt that in some aspects of the music, Mr. Brott's energies were a little misdirected. A tendency toward romantic swellings and heavings is understandable, considering the emotional quality of the score, but the effect on the listener is infinitely enhanced when the work is played in a mediative way, with little or no dynamic shading.

The conductor's ideas about the piece are well thought out and honest; I though the effect could have been increased by the more moderate use of the stock nineteenth century devices of swell and slowing up, but the fact remains that the impact was enormous on everyone there. (A choral from the St. Matthew Passion was played with a placid beauty at the beginning of the program in memory of the late Dr. A. H. S. Gillson, a former patron of the Music Society of McGill, and predecessor at the University.)

Turkish Banking Delight

Bank Deposits in Turkey jumped 25% last year and no wonder. Customers are lured by lotteries. Let's say you have the equivalent of $35 on deposit with a Turkish bank. It not only earns 3% interest, but also gives you a chance on a house and lot. The bigger your deposit, the greater the chance of winning. One customer has complained that an old-time sultan is taking advantage of the situation. He makes every member of his harem operate a separate savings account, thus increasing his household's chances of winning.

Delightful as it must be to operate a bank account in Turkey, you've got to admit that it's more convenient to have one closer to home. And while the Royal Bank can't offer McGill students a chance on a house and lot, it tries to make up for it with snappy service. There are six Royal Bank branches handy to McGill — Sherbrooke & Fort, Sherbrooke & Peel, St. Catherine & McGill, St. Catherine & Stanley, Sherbrooke & Bleury, and Sherbrooke & Guy. University Of Montreal Lead Tennis Meel

by Stu Smith

The University of Montreal yesterday got off to a flying start in the Senior Intercollegiate tennis meet at the McIntyre Courts. Led by Raymond Pagé, the U. of M. squad showed fine form as they racked up eleven of their twelve matches. Pagé took his singles match and participated in two victories in doubles play.

At the end of the first day's play, the Redmen were a solid third with Varsity in the runner-up spot. McGill and Toronto came up with six victories apiece, but the Blues played two matches less than our boys. The fourth team, Ottawa University, had a bad day and found themselves lodged in the cellar with one victory.

BOXING

Bert Light, McGill's boxing mentor, is more than pleased with the pugilistic setup at McGill this year. The team, which was only one point away from being champs last year, has been strengthened by the addition of two U.S. fighters — Don Harris, a heavy from Minnesota and 140 lbs. John Fawcett, ex-captain, San Francisco U. boxing team. Together with Pierre Raymond, 155 lb. defending champ, and some other good fighters, they shape up as a good bet for the championship if they can get more boys to complete the team. A practice will be held today at five p.m.

MODERN DANCE

Now that all of us are back into the swing of things, and the campus has returned to normal, it is time to set out on the road of enjoyment in the field of athletics. The Modern Dance Club tees off the season.

Anyone interested in modern dancing, and those of you who wish to find out what is really behind these words, are invited to attend the opening tea which is being held in the lower R.V.C. common room, on Thursday, October 14 at 1.15 p.m. Movies will be shown, and tea will be served at this time.

CHANGE OF COURSE

Students wishing to change a course for which they are registered must do so by completing the appropriate "Change of Course" forms available in the assistant dean's office, room 140 Arts Building. These forms (three) must be completed and turned in by the student who should call back within two days to receive his signed copy if the change is approved. Merely turning in the forms does not constitute authority for the change and it is the student's responsibility to ascertain that the change has been approved. The deadline date for changing courses is 12 o'clock noon, Saturday, October 16th and no requests whatsoever, will be considered after this date.

Four Daily Men Will Lose Legs

By Liz Gillespie

Have you ever wondered why men wear long pants? Daily staffers will have a chance to find out coming events

All entries for this column must be handed in to George at the Tuck Shop by noon on the day before they are to appear and by noon Friday for the Monday issue.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 14

Hillel:

Dr. Will Herberg, the noted author, will speak on "Democracy and Jewish Thought". All students invited to attend at 8 p.m., Hillel House, 3460 Stanley St.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15

McGill Christian Fellowship:

The M.C.F. Fall In, a welcoming party for all interested students, will be held at 8 p.m., Student House, 3445 Peel St.

Camera Club:

A meeting will be held from 1-2 p.m. in the clubroom to elect the executive. All interested in the club are welcome.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 17

Polish Club:

The first general meeting will be held at 2.30 p.m., Newman House, 2049 McGill College Ave. Plans for the coming year will be announced. Refreshments and dancing to follow meeting. Old and new members invited.

Chinese Student's Society:

A "City Tour" will be held for members and will meet in the main entrance to the Arts Building at p.m. sharp.

Westminster Fellowship:

The first general meeting, a informal get-together, will be held at 3.30 p.m. in the warden's suite, Douglas Hall.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 18

McGill Gliding Club:

A meeting to discuss the program of the coming year will be held at 8 p.m. in the Union Clubroom.

at the Daily Party tomorrow night. Four unidentified male staffers, or rather their legs, are going to be on the auction block. Female staffers are advised to start saving their pennies so they can bid for these magnificent underpinnings. The highest bidder will receive custody of the whole man, not just his legs, for a given period of time.

The party is scheduled to get under way tomorrow at 8.30 p.m. on the nose. It will be held in the Clubroom on the second floor of the Union.

All Daily staffers including both writers and photographers are invited to come and meet their fellow workers.

The party will be stag or drag. In past years most staffers have come stag as a matter of course. Girls are advised to wear either wool dresses or their nicest skirts and tops. Sports staffers are reminded that blue jeans are not in order.

Suitable refreshments will be served and a charge of 25c per person will be made.

OUTSIDE ATHLETICS

All students wishing to participate in outside athletics are required to apply for a release to do so. This application must be filled immediately and forms for this purpose may be obtained at the Athletics Office. Failure to obtain a release from McGill is liable to endanger your position with the University as well as your position with the league in which you play.

Those wishing to play basketball with some team outside the University are requested to see the coach, Joe Anderson as soon as possible. Basketball practices will begin this week.

The question this week was; "What do you think of the book rebates?"

Place: The Union.

Answers:

Peter Mendes, BSc III: "I could make more money using the time it takes to add up the figures, by working at a salaried job".

Carol Mendelsohn, B.A. II: "I think it stinks. I think the money should be used for grounds upkeep."

Joan Segal, B.A. II: "I think the idea is a good one because we are getting a reduction off books, even if it's a small one."

Phil Gold, B.Sc. II: "It seems to be a farce. The money should be used for students activities".

Eileen Murphy, Physio I: "The idea is useless. The money should be used towards scholarships or a new union."

Micheal Bickley, B.A. III: "I think it is a good idea, but a better one would be if the book store would cut its profits".

Ishael Libman, Med. III: "It would be better if calculations were made ahead of time, and a discount be taken off at the time of purchase".

Larry Genender, B.Sc. IV: "I personally think the idea's useless. It takes an already small pie and distributes it as crumbs to many people. The money should be put towards a new union, for example."

This reporter wishes to thank Marcia Crombie, for the above line out. Remember, we may approach you at any place and at any time however answering the question will not guarantee printing.

Women Invade Hart House At U. of T.

Hart House, Varsity's once all male domaine, is that no longer. For the first time women are being permitted entrance on a regular day to day basis.

The new coffee shop will be the centre of this co-educationalism. Called the Arbor Room, it is decorated throughout in that motif derived from the university motto "Velut Arbor Aevo".

The Warden of Hart House says no one has any intention of making Hart House activities co-educational.

An article in The Ryersonian says that the reign of women at Hart House is coming, that, although it may not be in effect until the turn of the century, it is coming, and it might be wise for the men to surrender peacefully.
